Fill to Be Made on the North Side of Main Street Bridge.

COUPONS DESTROYED.

An Appropriation of $1,500 Made for the Colored Schools.

The meeting of the city council, postponed from Nov. 15, was held Friday night with a full attendance. Chairman Galbreath, of the Corporations Committee, recommended a renewal of the contracts with the City Light Co., and the Hopkinsville Water Co., upon the same terms as this year. Interest coupons 21 to 122 redeemed from the railroad bonds ($51,000) were produced and destroyed by a committee composed of Councilmen Twyman and Clark.

The consideration of the ordinance allowing an overhead crossing on 18th street by the L. & N. railroad, was made a special order for the second regular meeting in December.

The final settlement with Collector H. C. Moore for 1906 taxes was postponed until the last meeting of the present council to be held Monday night, Dec. 2.

An appropriation of $1,500 was made from the school fund to aid the colored schools for the year 1907-1908. A written agreement with the trustees of the colored schools was ordered to be entered into and record to be made.

The arrival of the Seventh street bridge was noted and the mayor reported that he had been advised of the shipment of the Main street bridge from Pittsburgh.

The council, by a motion which received the votes of all the members, ordered the ford on the north side of the river at North Main street to be closed by a wall and fill.

Several corrections were made in erroneous settlements.

The Larkin Mfg Co., was allowed $11.00 for repairs in the fire department.

Councilman Twyman was ordered to purchase a car load of coal for the city.

BRUTAL DETAILS OF OUTRAGE

Old Man 75 Years Old Beaten With a Stick By Outlaws.

HE KNOWS THE MEN.

Other Fiendish Crimes In Governor Patterson's Bailiwick.

Dover, Tenn., Nov. 24.—The night riders who again made their appearance in this county Monday night of last month, visited several farmers on the north side of the river. The first seen of the riders was when they rode through Bumpus Mills, and it is reported that there were fifty or sixty in the "gang." They first called on John Melton, who was sick in bed. His wife told them that she could not come out. They replied that he had better crawl to the door if he could not get there any other way. Mr. Melton had been keeping an independent buyer for one or two nights, and the riders told him that he must not allow another independent buyer to stay with him. Then they went to the home of Lewis Downs and instructed him not to keep any independent buyers. After leaving Downs they went in search of George Deep, but Deep saw them coming up to his gate and took to the bushes. Failing to catch Deep, they informed his wife that they would be back after him some other night. They then went to the house of J. E. Parker, on the north bank of the river, opposite this place, but Parker succeeded in getting away. Next they went to the house of Berry Wallace, an old man, about 75 years of age. Mr. Wallace opened his door on them, but does not know if he hit any one. They took Wallace out and whipped him. His back was cut in several places and they also whipped him with a tobacco stick, striking him across the back and bruising him very badly. He was also struck across his hand with a stick, breaking his hand.

Mr. Wallace was not a member of the association, but it seems that the books had been closed, and that he had made efforts to join, but could not get in. He sold his crop of tobacco to an independent buyer, which was only a small crop of about 600 sticks.

Mr. Wallace says that he knows three of the men who whipped him, and his wife, who begged them to stop, says she is positive that she knows one of them. It is also reported that Mr. Downs recognized one or two of them.

Mr. Wallace is now in a serious condition and has not yet given up any names, but says he will do so as soon as he is able to come to town. This is the first time the night riders have whipped any one in this county, but in the spring they destroyed several plant beds. Mr. Wallace's house was shot into several times by the night riders, and he says that he does not know how they missed him. There are something like fifty bullet holes through his front door.

It is rumored that Mr. Wallace will implicate some men who are prominent farmers and who have been held above suspicion.

GOOD MEETING

Twenty-Seven Additions to the Church.

Trenton, Ky., Nov. 23.—One of the most successful meetings that has ever been held here has just closed at the Baptist church. Rev. E. B. Farrar assisted the pastor, Rev. B. F. Hagan. There were twenty-seven additions to the church.

STOCKHOLDERS.

In Hopkinsville May Get Back Their Money.

Word has been received from Chicago by Homer Batson and Benjamin F. Washer, attorneys for the Mutual Investment Company, and Lexington debenture concern which recently went under, that Judge C. C. Kohlsaat has decided that about $250,000 of assets belonging to the concern may be turned over to James C. Rogers, the Kentucky receiver. The Southern Mutual Investment Company, was merged into the American Reserve Bond Company, and on account of this merger there was a question as to whether the Kentucky receiver could recover the assets in question. Their recovery means an increased dividend for the stockholders at the final division.

CLARKSVILLE CONTEST.

Christian County Will Have Representation.

An old fiddlers' contest will be held at Elder's opera House, Clarksville, Friday night next, Nov. 29, for the benefit of the relief fund of Forbes Bianco, U. C. V. Christian county will be represented, among the list being a quartet composed of W. T. Randles, T. E. Bartley, R. J. William and Dr. Lackey.

SHOT AT DEER.

Animal Ran In Direction of Pilot Rock.

One day last week a deer came within a hundred yards of the home of Mr. John W. Shanklin, who lives near where old Goshen church stood, one mile East of this city. Mr. Shanklin got within sixty yards of the deer and shot twice at its head. The gun was loaded with bird shot. The deer ran in the direction of the Pilot Rock and has not been seen or heard of since.—Fairview Review.

Six Men Beat Him at Home of William West on Nov. 11th.

Was Employed as Laborer on James Hyland's Section.

Gov. Beckham has offered a reward of $250 for the arrest and conviction of each of the unknown assailants of John Wicks, on the night of Nov. 11, at the home of William West, near Pilot Rock. This amount has been supplemented by a further reward of $100 in each case by County Judge Breathitt. According to the story of Wicks, there were six men in the party, making the possible amount to be recovered $2,100. Mr. Wicks was brutally beaten and forced to leave in the night. The men were on foot and were evidently residents of the immediate vicinity.

It is believed that certain clews already discovered will lead to the apprehension of the gang in the near future.

GROCERY CHANGE.

Roy Kenner Buys Stock of R. W. Twyman.

Roy Kenner, who returned from Oklahoma a couple of weeks ago, has bought the grocery stock of R. W. Twyman, on Ninth street.

Mr. Kenner is one of the best grocermen in the city and his friends will be glad to learn that he has concluded to settle here instead of going to Oklahoma to go into business. Mr. Twyman has not signified what business he will engage in.

The only theory as to how the man met such a horrible death is that he had attempted to jump on the south bound train as it was leaving the city and missed his footing and fell under the train. It was said by one of the men who assisted in putting Wilson on the hand-car that he was dragged about 20 feet from where he was caught under the wheels of

Mr. Tandy has been so ill that a number of times his friends and physicians abandoned all hope of his recovery.

SECTION HAND

Sues Railroad Company for Alleged Injuries.

Louis Turnley has filed suit against the I. C. railroad company for $1,000 damages. Turnley is a negro section hand and was on the train, enroute to a point near Cerulean to go to work on the track, when the train ran into an open switch at Gracey one morning in October last. He alleged that his right shoulder was injured, he believes permanently, by the jerk given him at the time of the accident.

Pembroke Was Easy.

The second H. S. football team went to Pembroke Saturday and, in a sea of mud, overwhelmed the Pembroke High School team by the score of 42 to 0. The Pembroke team, although heavier by ten pounds, was completely outclassed by the Hopkinsville eleven. They could neither stop the line backs nor get through the interference on end runs. But for the referee the score would doubtless have been much larger. The Hopkinsville team lined up as follows: L. e. Petrie, l. t. Miller, l. g. Soars, c. Danforth, r. g. Hayes, r. t. Pursey, r. e. Wallace and Green, g. b. Smith (Capt.), l. h. Dabney, f. b. Rudd, r. h. Meacham.

FIELD TRIAL

Of Kentucky Club Was a Big Success.

Harry Ware, of near this city, attended the first field trial of the Kentucky Club at Le Center, about fourteen miles from Paducah, last week. He carried one of his fine dogs with him and took third prize. He reports that the meeting was a big success in every particular. Some of the finest bird dogs in the world were there. Thomas Johnson's of Wimbley, Canada, was present with a dog so valuable that it would take several thousand dollars to purchase him. Mr. Wall, a dog fancier of New York City, and who has several of the finest hunting dogs in this country, was also on hand.

The club during the first year of its existence has made an unusually fine start and the permanency of the club is assured. Plans were adopted looking to such changes in the game laws of Kentucky by the next legislature as will afford better protection to game. One of them is to limit the number of birds to be killed in one day to ten. It is intended also to give more power to game wardens and supply them with funds to rigidly enforce the observance of game laws.

Willson's Ambition.
A dispatch to the Philadelphia Record from Washington says that to be known as the Hughes of the South is said to be the ambition of Augustus E. Willson, the newly elected governor of Kentucky. This significant information leaked out in connection with the arrival in Washington of Governor-elect Willson, who went to have a conference with President Roosevelt at the latter's invitation, it is believed. Governor-elect Willson's friends say that he has taken Gov. Hughes of New York, for his model, and means to devote himself exclusively to the duties of his new position, neither mixing up in the scramble for Federal patronage nor for delegates to the Republican national convention in 1908. However, no matter what the course of the new governor may be the state can be counted on to give its electoral vote to the candidate of the Democratic party next year. Bre'r Willson should not deceive himself in the belief that the political lightning will strike twice in the same place for his party in this state. There is a large Democratic majority here and by the eternal it will assert itself next year.—Kentucky State Journal.

ARRESTED BAD MAN.

Officer Claxton Has Desperate Fight With a Negro.

Policeman Joe Claxton had a desperate encounter with a negro named Cal. Yancey near the L. & N. depot Saturday afternoon. A negro came to the officer and made complaint that Yancey had drawn a pistol on him in a saloon. Claxton went to the door of the saloon and ordered Yancey to come out, which he did muttering defiance. Once out he drew a 41 derringer from his coat pocket and cocking it told the officer he would shoot him before he would be arrested. Claxton ordered him to drop the pistol and when he did not do so struck him with his baton, grabbing his wrist. After two or three blows he finally knocked him down before he could get the pistol in range to shoot and secured the pistol. Yancey was landed in the lock-up.

Yancey was tried yesterday and given 100 days. $27.50 for carrying a pistol and $62.50 for breach of the peace and drawing a weapon. He will spend the winter working for the city.

DIDN'T WANT SCRIP.

And Was Handled Over 60 lbs in Silver.

Chicago.—A dispatch from Milwaukee, Wis., says:

Troubles of wealth weighed heavily on the hands of Peter Calahan, of Chicago, yesterday because he did not want Milwaukee bank certificates. Mr. Calahan came to visit one of the Milwaukee banking institutions where his personal note for $25 was due.

"Take the change out of that," commanded Mr. Calahan, handing out a $1,000 bill.

He refused scrip. Finally Mr. Calahan visited an attorney, who effected an agreement whereby he was paid in cash. The cash was counted out. It consisted of 974 silver dollars and some small change weighing sixty pounds.

"I am highly pleased with our Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and the eczema can hardly be seen slightly."

"It did her a sight of good. Then we completed the entire set of Cuticura Remedies and my wife is entirely recovered. She takes Cuticura every day, and has it highly recommended in our locality and in every nook and corner of our parish, and every person of our parish suffering from eczema uses Cuticura Soap and Ointment."—A. REFUSES TO WORK

And Now He Has a Fresh Charge to Answer.

Olivier Ford, a mean negro vagrant, has been trying to escape from the workhouse gang for several days, and yesterday morning attempted to wear two coats when he went out to work at the bridge fill. The keeper, E. C. Outlaw, made him take off one coat, believing he was trying to dash for liberty. After reaching the works he refused to work and attempted to grapple with Outlaw. Officer McCord, who was off duty, happened by at an opportune time and assisted in subjugating the turbulent prisoner after a fight and a display of his pistol. The negro was brought in on a fresh charge of breach of the peace.

ROCK BRIDGE YIELDS TO DYNAMITE

The Mutations of Time and the War of the Elements Could Not Phase It.

A Bridge Where Lovers Made Their Trysting Place, The Lone Sentinel Trod and Two Generations Passed.

Out of a population of between 13,000 and 14,000 people probably not more than 200 or 300 can be found who remember when the North Main street stone bridge was built.

It was in 1858 that the county court awarded the contract to build a double arch stone bridge to take the place of the wooden one that had done service for a quarter of a century or more. One William Hyde, a stone mason of reputation, was chosen to do the work at a stated figure. A. D. Rodgers was county judge. Judge Rodgers was an ideal county Judge. Every interest of the county was carefully guarded by him and when work was done it was as if it were for himself. He was not considered a great lawyer but everybody had the utmost confidence in his integrity and sound judgment. Graft was unknown in those days and when contractor Hyde completed his undertaking the county had a piece of work that would easily have lasted several hundred years.

But Mr. Hyde was about bankrupted by a flood which came and swept away what little profit might have been realized.

One morning shortly after daylight the news spread over town that "The Rock Bridge," which name it bore up to the time of its demolition to make room for the broader structure of stone and iron soon to be completed, had been washed away! Of course no one believed that the flood, which had come during the silent hours of the night, could carry away a stone and county would not be at the expense of tearing it away and constructing a larger, if not better.

But we ought to praise the bridge that has safely "carried over" so many hundreds of thousands.

Armies of Southern and Northern soldiers have marched in solid columns over it; funeral corteges half a century; many of the industrious people of Pond River have never seen anything larger or grander across it than they come and gone since childhood; sweet tales of love have been whispered while love-sick swains were seated on its parapets at night (before the introduction of arc lights); for fifty long years everybody on this side of the river that has "shuffled off this mortal coil" and gone to join the silent majority has been carried over it; Often during the war's dark days did the lone sentry of the Blue and the Gray stand at your portals while guarding an army within the lines; you have heard the tramp, tramp, of the relief guard, and many hundreds of times has the shoulder-strapped officer, whose sweetheart was waiting for him on the other side of the river, thanked you for his easy passage over the stream that you spanned; across it was marched the fearless Brewer and his doomed comrade when a volley of musketry was poured into their bared breasts; across it did three of his wounded men rush for safety just before daylight the morning when Woodward, who feared neither man nor devil, recklessly lost his life at Ninth and Main streets. Grand old "Rock Bridge!" You laughed at the ravages of time and flood for fifty years, and nothing harmed you. Like Caleb of old, you were as strong at your last day as when you began to serve man. You braved all, stood all, until one day a man put a charge of dynamite under you and—up you went! You are gone forever, but we love your memory. Your lovely picture can be seen in the North and the South—almost everywhere. Many with artistic taste have praised your beauty and your sun-shadow can be seen across the seas. You are gone, but it will be more than half a century before you are forgotten by the little ones of today.

MAIN STREET.
(Of course persons of strong local attachments hate to give up an old land-mark like the famous old "Rock Bridge." It served its days and purpose but was entirely inadequate to meet the wants of a city of the size of Hopkinsville. It sat cata-cornered across the stream, was not near wide enough and was unsafe for footmen. It was cheaper to get it out of the way and build a new one than to widen it. The people on the North side of the river wanted and demanded a wider, better bridge and the city councilmen thought the time had arrived to give it to them. Its completion will be pushed as rapidly as possible.)

LEMONS ARE MEDICINE,

Therefore It Is No Harm to Sell Them on Sunday.

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 21.—That a lemon is a medicine was officially determined by the supreme court today. The decision came in an opinion by Judge Fox reversing the judgment of the Barry county circuit court against James Campbell and disregarding, Campbell who was convicted of selling lemons on Sunday.

WORD ON ALL SIGNS

Of Corporations, Declares the Court of Appeals.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 22.—The court of appeals affirmed the consolidated cases of the Commonwealth vs Remington Typewriter Company, Windsisch-Mulhauser Brewing Company, Lexington Brewing and Singer Sewing Machine Company. The appellants were proceeded against for violation of Section 576 under Section 11 of the code for failing to put the word "incorporated" on signs.

The court holds that the act is constitutional but decides that the prosecution must take place in the county in which the home office of the corporation is situated or the agent is located.

Found Dead.

Walker P. Roman, one of the most prominent and wealthy men in Georgia, was found dead in his bed at Atlanta.

While the combination of capital in all lines of industrial enterprises during the past few years, has made it almost impossible for a man with a limited amount of money to engage in the mercantile or manufacturing business and successfully cope with the large corporations, the same rule applies to the theatrical business. At the present time nearly all of the first class attractions are controlled by a company or an individual, who has practically unlimited resources and from ten to twenty companies on tour, and they are sold financially to quote a well known insurance company, as "The Rock of Gibraltar."

"My Wife's Family," which appeared at Holland's opera house Thursday night, Nov. 28, is owned by the Whitney Amusement company, a corporation, which not only controls a large number of theatrical attractions, but is also interested in many theatres throughout the United States and Canada. Their business is conducted on the same legitimate principles as a bank and they realize that in order to get the patronage of the people to whom they cater, it is necessary to deliver the goods, consequently the standard of the companies under this management is maintained to such a degree of excellence that they play annual engagements in all of the principal cities to large receipts each year.

Attraction No. 4.

Maro, the Wonder, will fill attraction No. 4 at union tabernacle next Saturday night. A long time ago a slight of hand performers used to explain what they could do that was spelled something like this "predestidigitator." Maro is more than that; he is a regular trondumelumophilinoprasimomento. If you don't believe that he is a whole show by himself go and see him Saturday night. BRADLEY'S BANQUET

Geo. H. Cox, Secretary of Owensboro B. M. A. Put on the Board.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 25.—J. W. Porter, of Fayette county, was elected president of the Kentucky State Development association at the final session of the sixth annual convention of the association, held Thursday afternoon at the Galt House.

The other officers of the association elected were as follows:

First president—Frank M. Fisher, McCracken county.

Second vice president—R. C. Ford, Bell county.

Geo. H. Cox, of Owensboro, is a member of the State executive committee from the Second district. Henderson was selected as the next place of meeting. Owensboro and Paducah also extended invitations.

Tells of Love for State.

"I yield to no man in my love for Kentucky," affirmed Gov. Bradley, in response to the toast, "Law and Order." "With all her faults I love her still, and with her stills I love her faults. However, there are some of her faults we must band ourselves together to redeem. We want no peaceful armies with buggy whips and clubs marching through the land. We want every man to have the right to vote unquestioned and to have that vote honestly counted.

"Can we expect a farmer to come to Kentucky and buy land when he is to be told what he may plant, when he may plant it and when he may harvest it—or not harvest it? If it suits some one else. There are conditions in some parts of the State that must be remedied before we proclaim to the world that Kentucky is—as she really is—the most glorious of the sisterhood of Commonwealths."

"Law and order are the main-springs of progress and prosperity. I love Kentucky beyond the Republican party, beyond anything else in the world. Let us then enforce the laws we have, let us repeal the bad ones and make new which we can respect and observe and make the whole United States proud of Kentucky."

A Mystery Story of San Francisco

BY

EARLE ASHLEY WALCOTT

(Copyright 1906, the Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Dudley arrives in San Francisco to join his friend and agent there, Mr. Wilton, who is to assist in an important and mysterious case which had accompanied Dudley on his recent tour of travel. The remarkable resemblance of the two men causes a great stir among the passengers on the ferry. They see a man with snarling eyes, who is a threat to Dudley. With postpone explanation of the strange errand Dudley is to go to San Francisco, he wishes to know if it is one of ordinary means, or whether Giles, in his room, with instructions to him, will return and shoot any one who tries to enter.

CHAPTER II.—Dudley is heard shouting in his cups and is heard quarreling with some one in the quartier. Henry rushes in and at his request Dudley goes to his room, clothes, and he hurried out again. Hardly more than Giles is startled by a cry of "Help!" and sees some one being assaulted by a half dozen men. Dudley, with his revolver, is unable to find any trace of a crime.

CHAPTER III.—Giles returns to his room, where he is heard to explain his strange mission. He reveals much which he endeavors to keep secret, but is forced to do so by the presence of some one in his room. The man who is the boy? Four figures come to the rescue and bind and gag the murderer, and Giles, with the help of Dudley, and receives a note regarding money.

CHAPTER IV.—Dudley is summoned to the morgue and there finds the dead body of a man whom he had been killed during the night outside of the city. He is puzzled over the note he had received from the night before.

CHAPTER V.—In order to discover the secret mission his friend had entrusted to him, Dudley has assumed the name and permits himself to be known as Henry Wilton. He is puzzled over the note he had received from the night before bank for money. He is called before Knapp, the manager of Pine Street, the house which looks like a den of iniquity, for Wilton is employed by the police to stop a working gang.

CHAPTER VI.—"Dicky" takes a seat with Wilton in Mother Benton's parlor. Mrs. Benton discovers that he is not Wilton, and asks him to leave. Dudley, however, terous man asks about "the boy." A man in the room, who runs away, causes the man to rave. The lights are turned out and free for all right follows.

CHAPTER VII.—Runaway comes himself closed in a room with Mother Benton, who makes a complaint of him. He can not understand why the same boy further that it is Tim Ferrell and that he is a son of a b----. He is told that "Dicky" is a traitor, paid to work in the hands of the police.

CHAPTER VIII.—Dudley finds a woman locked in a room. He escapes through a window and finds a "curious" thing in the building vacant and bare.

CHAPTER IX.—The supposed woman comes to him and demands his help. Duddridge Knapp, who goes to receive visitors, shows Dudley a card with Plymire printed on all the letter forms. He makes his first order at the offices of Knapp, the forgery of which he is honored. He has his first experience as a member of the Board Room of the Stock Exchange.

CHAPTER X.—Dudley detects some danger in going to the office of Knapp's door and recognizes the face of Tim Ferrell, of the snake eyes. Dudley receives a friendly warning from Knapp, the forgery of which he is honored. Knapp.

CHAPTER XI.—Dudley visits the home of Knapp and is stricken by the beauty of Luella, the Wolf's daughter. She makes a complaint about her son privately informs Dudley that she has discovered his deception and knows he is not Wilton.

CHAPTER XII.—The body of Henry Wilton is committed to the vault.

"Perhaps, but you're not telling me what Mr. Knapp is doing."

"He can tell you better than I."

"No doubt," she said with a trace of sarcasm in her voice.

"And I suppose he comes to do it, I expect," I said, as the tall figure of the King of the Street appeared in the doorway opposite.

"I'm afraid I shall have to depend on the newspapers," she said. "Mr. Knapp is as much afraid of a woman's tongue as you are. Oh, she is bad after all, I suppose. I was going to make you give an account of yourself; but since you will tell nothing I must introduce you to my cousin, Mrs. Bowser."

"And she led me in, unresisting, to a short, sharp-featured woman of sixty or thereabouts, who rustled her silks, and in a high, thin voice puffed out her chest.

She might have claimed and held the record as the champion of the conversational ring. I had never met her equal before, nor have I met one to surpass her since.

Had I been long in the city? She had been here only a week. Came from Maine way. This was a dear, drowsy, drowsy place. I had to sleep, and such dreadful winds, wasn't it? And then she gave me a catalogue of the places she had visited, and the attractions of San Francisco, with a wealth of detail and a poverty of interest that was little less than marvelous.

Fortunately she had said nothing but an occasional murmur of assent in the form of answer from me.

I looked across the room to the corner where Luella was entertaining the insignificant Inman. How vivacious and intelligent she appeared! Her face and figure grew on me in attraction, and I felt that I was very bad indeed. I wanted to leave this polished room, but just behind me were plainly audible under the shrill treble of Mrs. Bowser. They were women with their heads close in gossip.

"Shockin', isn't it?" said one.

"Dreadful!" said the other. "It gives me the creeps to think of it."

"Don't they lock him up? Such a creature shouldn't be allowed to go at large."

"Oh, you see, maybe they can't be sure about it. But I've heard it's a case of family pride."

I was recalled from this dialogue by Mrs. Bowser's fan on my arm, and her shrill voice in my ear with, "What is your idea about it, Mr. Wilton?"

"I think you are perfectly right," I said, as she paused for an answer.

"Then I'll arrange it with the others at once," she said.

This was a bucket of ice-water on me. I had not the first idea of what I had committed myself.

"No, I'll wait till we have time to discuss it again."

"Oh, you see, we can decide on the time whenever you like. Will some night next week suit you?"

I had to throw myself on the mercy of the enemy.

"I'm afraid I'm getting rather absent-minded," I said humbly. "I was looking at the knife in your hand, and the discourse for a minute."

"That's what I was talking about," she said sharply—"about taking her and the rest of us through Chinatown."

"Yes, yes, I remember," I said unblushingly. "If I can get away from business, I'm at your service at any time."

Then Mrs. Bowser wandered on with the assignments she would and needed to make, and I heard one of the low voices behind me:

"Now this is a profound secret, you know. I wouldn't have them know for the world that any one suspects. I just heard it this week, myself."

"Oh, I wouldn't dare breath it to a soul," said the other. "But I'm sure I shan't sleep a wink to-night." And there was a laugh.

I interrupted Mrs. Bowser to explain that I must speak to Mrs. Knapp and made my escape as some one stopped to pass a word with her.

"Oh, must you go, Henry?" said Mrs. Knapp. "Well, you must come again soon. We miss you when you stay away. Don't let Mr. Knapp keep you away."

I professed myself happy to come whenever I could find the time, and looked about for Luella. She was nowhere to be seen. I left the room a little disappointed, but with a swelling pride that I had passed the dreaded ordeal and had been accepted as Henry Wilton in the house in which I had been reared to success.

"Go on," I said. "I hope I may never see you again!" And she turned and ran swiftly up the stair. I thought I heard a sob, but whether of anger or sorrow I knew not.

And I went out into the night with a heavy load of depression that had borne since I entered the city.

ceive me. Who are you? What are you here for? What are you trying to do?"

She was blazing with wrath. Her tone had raised hardly an interval of time, but the smooth, low voice was heavy with contempt and anger. It was the true daughter of the Wolf who stood before me.

"I am afraid, Miss Knapp, are you not well to-night?" I said soothingly.

"What's the matter with Henry Wilton?" she asked fiercely. "Don't try to speak with his voice. Drop your disguise. You are no actor. You are no more like him than—"

"Satyr or Hyperion," I quoted bitterly. "Make it strong, please."

I had thought myself in a tight place when I had come to the door of Mrs. Knapp's room, but this was worse.

"Oh, where is he? What has happened?" she cried.

"Nothing has happened," I said calmly, determined at last to brave it out. I could not tell her the truth. "My name is Henry Wilton."

She let out a shriek in me as a moment and then a howl of dread and despair settled over her face.

I was tempted beyond measure to throw myself on her mercy and tell all. The subtle sympathy that she inspired was softening my resolution. Yet, as I looked into her eyes, her face hardened and her wrath blazed forth more.

"Go on," I said. "I hope I may never see you again!" And she turned and ran swiftly up the stair. I thought I heard a sob, but whether of anger or sorrow I knew not.

And I went out into the night with a heavy load of depression that had borne since I entered the city.

CHAPTER XIII.—A Day of Grace.

Reactive, shame, despair, fought with each other in the tumult in which I passed between the bronze lions and took my way down the street.

I was called out of my distractions with a sudden start as though a bucket of cold water had been thrown over me. I had proceeded not many feet when I saw two dark forms across the street. They had, it struck me, been waiting for my appearance, for one ran to join the other and both hastened toward the corner as though to ready to meet me.

I could not retreat to the house of the Wolf, the location having been given to me. There was nothing to do but to go forward and trust to my good fortune, and I shifted my revolver to the side-pocket of my overcoat as I stepped briskly to the corner. Then I stopped under the lamp-post to reconnoiter.

The two men who had roused my apprehension had stopped to cross the street, but staggered in the darkness and trudged slowly along on the other side. I noted that it seemed a long way between street-lamps therabouts, but I saw no sign of skulking figures before the car swept past the corner and drove into the distance.

The incident gave me a distinct idea for the idea of going back to Henry Wilton's room at this time of the night. So at Montgomery street I stepped into the Lick house, where I felt reasonably sure that I might get at least one night's sleep, from the haunts of the street.

But once more the female charms of Luella Knapp again claimed the major part of my thoughts, and when I went to sleep I was with her scornful words ringing in my ears. I slept soundly until the morning sun peeped into the room with the cheerful announcement that a new day was born.

In the far corner of the air and the bright morning light, I felt that I might have been unduly suspicious and had fled from harmless citizens; and I was ashamed that I had lacked courage to return to Henry's room as I made my way thither for a change of scene, but I had been compelled to do so.

Luella, however, as I stepped within the gloomy walls of the house of mystery and my footfalls echoed through the chilling silence of the halls. And I lost all regret over my night's lack of courage when I reached my door.

"Who is it?" I said half-inquisitively. It was not safe to advance or retreat.

"Well—well!" She repeated my answer with indignation and disdain deepening in her voice. "Is that all you have to say for yourself?"

"What should I say?" I replied quietly. "Can you make an assertion. Is there anything more to be said?"

"Oh, you may laugh at me if you please, because you can howl louder than the others."

I protested that laughter was of the last thing I was thinking of at the moment.

"Then she burst out impetuously: "Oh, if I were only a man! No; if I were a man I should be able to hold back the rest. But you can not deceive me. Who are you? What are you here for? What are you trying to do?"

I stopped short and hunted my revolver from my overcoat pocket. I was nervous for a moment, and angry at the inattention that might have cost me my life.

"Who's there?" I demanded.

"Nelly."

I gave a knock on the door at long reach.

There was no sound and I gave it a push that sent it open while I prudently kept behind the fortification of the casing. As no developments followed this move, I peeped through the door in cautious investigation. The room was quite empty, and I walked inward comment.

I stopped short and hunted my revolver from my overcoat pocket. I was nervous for a moment, and angry at the inattention that might have cost me my life.

"Who's there?" I demanded.

"Nelly."

I gave a knock on the door at long reach.

The sight that met my eyes was astonishing. Clothes, books, papers, were scattered over the floor and bed and chairs. The carpet had been partly ripped up, the mattress torn apart, the closet cleared out, and every corner of the room had been recked.

It was clear to my eye that this was no ordinary case of robbery. The search, it was evident, was not for money and jewelry alone, and bulkier property had been despised. The men who had taken the place to must, I surmised, have been after papers of some kind.

I came at once to the conclusion that I had been favored by a visit from my friends, the enemy. As they had failed to find me in, they had looked for some written memoranda of the object of their search.

I had found nothing among the clothing or papers that Henry had left behind. I had searched through these myself, and the sole document that could bear on the mystery was at that moment fast in my inside pocket. I was inclined to scout the idea that Henry Wilton had hidden anything under the carpet or in the corners of the room in secret places.

The threads of the mystery were carried in his head, and the correspondence, if there had been any, was destroyed.

As I was engaged in putting the room to rights the door swung back, and I jumped to my feet to face a man in blood on the threshold.

"Hello!" he cried. "House-cleaning again?"

It was Dickie Nahl, and he paused with a smile on his face.

"Ah, Dicky!" I said with an effort to keep out of my face and voice the suspicions I had gained from the incidents of the visit to the Borton place. "Entirely unprepared, I assure you."

OUSTS A DEMOCRAT.

Candidates Cannot Put Advertisements on Balot.

The incident gave me a distinct idea for the idea of going back to Henry Wilton's room at this time of the night. So at Montgomery street I stepped into the Lick house, where I felt reasonably sure that I might get at least one night's sleep, from the haunts of the street.

But once more the female charms of Luella Knapp again claimed the major part of my thoughts, and when I went to sleep I was with her scornful words ringing in my ears. I slept soundly until the morning sun peeped into the room with the cheerful announcement that a new day was born.

In the far corner of the air and the bright morning light, I felt that I might have been unduly suspicious and had fled from harmless citizens; and I was ashamed that I had lacked courage to return to Henry's room as I made my way thither for a change of scene, but I had been compelled to do so.

Luella, however, as I stepped within the gloomy walls of the house of mystery and my footfalls echoed through the chilling silence of the halls. And I lost all regret over my night's lack of courage when I reached my door.

It was swinging in my ear and the door was swung an inch ajar, and as I approached I thought I saw a move.

"I'm certain I locked it," was my

FOURTEEN DIE, SCORES HURT.

Gridiron Season Claims as Many Victims as Previous Years, Except 1905.

PLAY MORE CONTESTS

Total List of Fatalities and Injuries Expected to Be Increased.

Football has claimed its annual toll of victims says the Chicago Record-Herald.

Fourteen dead youths and children, scores of permanently maimed and disfigured players and the thousands of parents who have been the real sufferers in the "scrimmages" and "downs" have paid the yearly tribute to the game.

"Debrutalized" football, declared a sport even for children, has listed as many victims in the forty-two days of the present season as any preceding year, save 1905, when public outcry arose against the "sport" that had killed twenty-four and injured 200 players.

The season has not yet closed. In the East many of the universities have not finished their season. In the West, although the college championship was decided, scores of high school and amateur games still remain to be played. From these the present total of injuries and possibly of deaths will be increased.

Death List May Grow.

The death list of 1907 cannot be computed until a month or more after the season has ended. Internal injuries, partial paralysis and other causes have always added a gloomy chapter to the football post-season. Concussion of the brain and fractured skulls disabled six of the victims now listed only in the injured column.

Spinal injuries not now deemed serious ended the football career of others. Not for many years may the final tabulation be made on 1907 football victims.

The revised rules of the game have not fulfilled the hopes of their framers. While the deadly mass plays have been eliminated, they have been succeeded by evolutions in which the speed and combination plays have proved almost as hazardous to the antagonists.

MAN CUT IN TWAIN

the train, as the rail and the ends of trees were covered with blood. The remains lay on the track from 6:25 Sunday evening until found yesterday morning.

In a talk with the section foreman Hyland, he said that Wilson had been working under dim for eight months. He was not addicted to drinking to excess and was an industrious and reliable man.

From what the section foreman says about Wilson's habits, even the jury's investigation showing that his left arm was broken and finding a bad cut over his left eye, there is no basis for a theory that the man met his death in any way other than they indicated.

ANNUAL REUNION.

McComb Family Heralds Observe Usual Custom.

Mrs. Dr. J. Richardson and her brother, John McComb, of Louisville, arrived in the city last Friday and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Jarrett, of East Seventh Street.

This is the season for the annual reunion of the children of Jesse McComb, who died in 1862. Ever since the war this custom has been kept up.

There has not been a death in the family since the father died, but the children are growing old now, the youngest being 62 years of age and the oldest 72. The surviving members of the family are Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. Jarrett and Messrs. John, Holliday, Lyndon and Walter.

All of them live in Kentucky excepting the youngest, Walter, whose home is in Nashville. Heretofore it has been possible for all of them to attend the gatherings, which last for a week or more, but owing to business affairs it was impossible for Messrs. Dudley and Walter to be here this year.

BIG BAPTIZING

Follows The Colored Baptist Revival Sunday.

There was another baptizing at the foot of First street, in what is known as the "mill pond" Sunday at 11:30 o'clock, following the revival at the colored Baptist church.

Rev. E. Williams, the pastor, was baptized by Rev. James Allensworth, baptized 97 converts with a degree of rapidity that broke all records in this part of the state.

The candidates were formed in two sides of a square and each minister immersed from three to five minute.

As fast as the ceremony was concluded, those baptized were escorted to the bank by other assistants and sent to their homes. The baptism was witnessed by probably 2,000 people who lined both banks of the river, a large proportion of them being white people. Good order and decorum characterized the occasion. This is the second baptizing this month. About 40 were baptized two weeks ago.
